Bandelier National Monument Tour

Monday, September 18, 1:00pm – 6:00pm

Travel to Bandelier National Monument where you'll descend into a canyon filled with the ruins of the Anasazi Indians, colloquially "the Ancient Ones." Located on the Pajarito Plateau of the volcanic Jemez Mountains, Bandelier was the home of the Anasazi from the eleventh to fourteenth centuries. Excavated over 90 years ago, these ruins were once home to over 200 people, ancestors of today's Pueblo Indians. Hundreds of petroglyphs carved by the original residents are still visible. You may walk along easy paths past the remains of ancient Pueblo dwellings to the cliff dwellings where you can climb ladders to peer inside. From Bandelier the group will move on to Los Alamos where they will visit the Bradbury Museum. The Bradbury Science Museum is a highlight of a visit to Los Alamos and a project in which the community takes great pride. The museum's main focus is an overview of the work taking place at Los Alamos National Laboratory, and exhibits include looks at the history of the Manhattan Project (including the first cases of the atomic bomb), as well as displays of the latest in laser, computer, geothermal, solar, nuclear, and other technologies, from health research to environmental studies.

COST: $76 per person includes transportation, guide, entrance fees, bottled water on board, gratuities and tax, based on a minimum of 20 guests.
